PERFORMANCE CHART

COMMENTARY

Over the month, the Titan Global Balanced USD Fund returned +1.8%, ahead of international peers at 0.7%. On a year-to-date basis, the fund has returned 4.0% versus 2.4%.

Although global markets have since been heavily impacted by implications of the joint US–Israeli military strikes against Iran, which first took place on 28th February, the month was relatively subdued. Over the period, equity markets rose, but there was a continued rotation away from the US as investors continued to be wary of large-cap technology stocks amid concerns over the high return expectations built in post significant spending on AI. Beneficiaries were Europe, Japan, emerging markets and smaller-cap stocks, which all delivered stronger relative performance signalling a potential broadening of market strength.

In respect to underlying positions, despite AI concerns, new position Polar Artificial Intelligence was the star performer, experiencing returns close to 9.6%. Its bias towards companies that enable AI, particularly in semiconductors, and the power/energy infrastructure required for data centres and underweight to software assisted in the environment.

Earlier in the year, we also added a dedicated allocation to Japanese equities as the final part of our diversification plan through regional positions. Japan rose strongly in February following a landslide victory for the Liberal Democratic Party, in the House of Representatives election, which boosted expectations for political stability and pro-growth policies.

All the portfolio's fixed income holdings had positive gains, although still underperformed equities. Global credit managers were the flavour of the month and this was reflected in the Rathbone Ethical Bond Fund (+1.1%) as well as Schroder Strategic Credit (+0.6%) being top of the pack.

Specialised areas of the market continue to be a source of good risk-adjusted returns. Moreover, the fund's 'diversifying assets' bucket exhibited its value in the portfolio, producing solid uncorrelated returns. The Ruffer Total Return Fund was particularly impressive, gaining 2.4%.

Our focus at this time is to remain well-diversified and monitor the underlying fund positions to ensure they are behaving as we would expect during this volatile time. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have any questions.
